

Dr Amy Miller is a Lecturer at Health Sciences University (UK), where she teaches on the chiropractic and MSK Paediatric Health courses. Her research focuses on spinal pain and MSK problems in young people, working with the international COURSE study team to develop understanding of this global issue. Collaboration and co-creation are at the heart of Amy's research, and she has developed a Young Persons Advisory Group for MSK research. She has been an invited speaker on DEI at several international events, and sits on the Inclusive Community working group at HSU. Amy is a Fellow of the European Academy of Chiropractic (Paediatrics) and Chiropractic Academy for Research Leadership (CARL) programme.
